

Sarah Lipo is a sophomore at Marquette University from Oak Park, Illinois, a suburb just outside of Chicago. At Marquette, she is the Assistant News Editor for the Marquette Wire and an intern with the Neighborhood News Service, a Milwaukee online publication that serves community members in city neighborhoods that may not be covered by other publications.

Sarah applied for the Foley Scholarship because she was inspired by James Foley's dedication to the art of journalism, as well as his commitment to giving voice to the those who may not be heard. In her free time, she enjoys running down to the lakefront, exploring coffee shops around Milwaukee and volunteering through Midnight Run.
