LETTER FROM PRESIDENT & FOUNDER

Dear Friends,

Thanks to YOU, the James W. Foley Legacy Foundation has been able to carry forward Jim’s legacy of moral courage in U.S. hostage advocacy and journalist safety for ten years since his horrific murder in 2014. Since we began our work in September 2014, more than 145 fellow Americans have been freed. Your ongoing support has also enabled us to partner with dozens of journalism schools to integrate safety education into their curricula and deliver local newsroom safety training. YOU have made this 10th anniversary possible, and we are forever grateful.

2024 began with the publication of American Mother, which I co-wrote with National Book Award-winning Irish American author Colum McCann. The book has since been translated into French, Dutch, German, and Italian. I invite you to purchase a signed copy through the Foley Foundation to support our work. I was deeply moved by the interest in our story and the Foundation while promoting the book in France, Ireland, and England. American Mother is now being used in classes at Marquette University and a local high school.

This year, we welcomed Liz Richards as our new Director of Hostage Advocacy and Research. Liz, a former U.S. Air Force servicemember, led a team at Fort Meade, Maryland, that resolved 18 cases of captivity and rescued 30 civilians worldwide. More recently, she taught behavioral statistics and research methods as an adjunct university professor. Her background in clinical psychology has enabled her to quickly build trust with the many families who come to us for help. Liz is continuing our respected, ground-breaking research with hostage families, returned hostages, and subject-matter experts. The rigor of her work ensures that the Foley Foundation’s policy recommendations remain fact-based and nonpartisan.

A highlight of the 2024 Foley Freedom Awards was a live performance by Sting of the song “The Empty Chair,” written for the HBO documentary Jim: The James Foley Story. We presented awards for hostage advocacy, journalism, humanitarianism, and excellence in government to five extraordinary individuals of moral courage.

To mark our tenth anniversary, we adopted a new logo designed by Jim’s childhood friend, Brian Oakes. It features helping hands shaped as a flame of hope—symbolizing light amid the darkness of captivity, the truth that brave journalists bring us under threat, and the inner light that challenges each of us to act with moral courage. The colors—yellow, gold, and black—align with the new U.S. Hostage/ Wrongful Detainee flag, which unites Americans working to free U.S. nationals held captive abroad.

We’ve integrated our public advocacy efforts with the family-led Bring Our Families Home Campaign to raise awareness of their loved ones’ plight. The Foley Foundation’s increased engagement with Congress has resulted in greater support for families enduring the trauma of a loved one’s captivity and for survivors upon their return. This year, our nation observed the first Hostage and Wrongful Detainee Day on March 9—the date of Robert Levinson’s disappearance. This annual remembrance will help raise awareness of the international targeting of U.S. nationals and promote the return of Americans still held abroad.

Your generosity allowed the Foley Foundation to help secure the freedom of 17 Americans in 2024 from imprisonment in China, Nigeria, Sudan, Nicaragua, Russia, and Saudi Arabia. It also enabled us to provide free journalist safety curricula to 20 universities. Jim’s legacy continues to inspire students at both the high school and university levels through the documentary and the new book.

My friends, the Foley Foundation began because of Jim’s moral courage—but it continues because of YOU. Your passion for our mission, compassion for victims of hostage-taking, support for courageous journalists, and personal generosity are small miracles that warm my heart every day.

With deep gratitude,
Diane M. Foley
President & Founder

LETTER FROM EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends and Partners,

This year marked my first full year as the Foley Foundation's Executive Director. I'm honored to be part of this passionate community of advocates, educators, journalists, researchers, and volunteers. With this report, I'm pleased to share that in 2024, the Foundation observed important anniversaries, expanded James Foley's legacy in new ways, and was privileged to secure record levels of support.

Anniversaries: August 19 marked the tenth anniversary of Jim's murder. Many of you shared heartfelt remembrances of his impact on your lives. In September, to commemorate the Foundation's establishment, the U.S. Senate adopted Resolution 805, recognizing the profound hostage-taking policy reforms driven by our advocacy. In October, the rock band BoDeans headlined a reprise of the 2014 concert "Jamming for Jimmy," held in Jim's honor. Finally, the launch of American Mother, a book written by Colum McCann and Diane Foley, introduced the Foundation to new audiences and inspired renewed support for our mission.

Foundation Firsts: In March, the Foley Foundation partnered with the McCain Institute to organize three public observances of the inaugural National Hostage & Wrongful Detainee Day. The first included a panel discussion at the U.S. Department of State with survivors and family members of those held abroad, followed by a ceremony raising the new national Hostage & Wrongful Detainee flag for the first time. We then hosted an event on Capitol Hill highlighting progress since the establishment of the U.S. hostage enterprise in 2015. Finally, we joined Rep. French Hill (R-AR) and Rep. Haley

Stevens (D-MI), Co-Chairs of the Hostage Task Force, for a press conference spotlighting families of Americans unjustly detained overseas.

In May, Marquette University's Raynor Library unveiled the James Wright Foley Archives Collection, which includes Jim's journalistic work, letters, notes from captivity, personal writings, and materials from the documentary Jim: The James Foley Story. The collection will also document the work of the Foley Foundation. At the unveiling, Diane Foley accepted Marquette University's Alumni Service Award on Jim's behalf, honoring him posthumously alongside the Foundation.

In June, Congress held a rare public oversight hearing featuring testimony from key leaders of the U.S. government's hostage enterprise, including the Assistant Secretary of State for Consular Affairs, the Special Presidential Envoy for Hostage Affairs, and the Director of the Hostage Recovery Fusion Cell. To prepare for this hearing, the Foley Foundation helped the House Foreign Affairs Committee organize a roundtable with hostage families and advocates, ensuring their voices were heard on the record.

Also in June, I attended the Oslo Freedom Forum, organized by the Human Rights Foundation. During the event, the Resisting Illegal Government Detentions and Hostage-Taking (RIGHT) Coalition was formed—an international alliance of civil society organizations working to replicate successful advocacy models and counter the practice of arbitrary detention and so-called "hostage diplomacy."

Policy Impact: At the end of 2024, important legislation based on Foley Foundation research and advocacy was codified into U.S. law. The new law directs the Department of State to develop hostage-taking deterrence and prevention strategies and to launch public advisory campaigns warning against travel to countries known to wrongfully detain Americans. Addressing a key concern of families, the law requires the Secretary of State to make wrongful detention designation decisions within 180 days and to notify families of those decisions. To support freed hostages, the President is now authorized to issue a "declaration of invalidity," effectively expunging sham criminal convictions imposed by captor nations—helping survivors navigate background checks and rebuild their lives.

Leadership and Growth: In 2024, the Foundation's Board of Directors welcomed two new members. Neda Sharghi, former chair of the Bring Our Families Home Campaign, brings deep experience as a family advocate. Attorney Mark Donig, who has led successful efforts to free American hostages and defend pro-democracy dissidents, also joined the board. We also bid farewell to long-time board member Jere Van Dyk—author, Pulitzer-nominated journalist, and expert on Afghanistan, Pakistan, and the Middle East. We are deeply grateful for his years of service and commitment.

Setting Records: This year's Foley Freedom Awards raised over $350,000—a record for the Foundation. The Foley Freedom Run also saw its highest participation to date, and a dedicated team of supporters ran the D.C. Marine Corps Marathon, creating a new source of funding. We are humbled and inspired by the generosity our mission continues to attract.

The progress described in this report has been made possible by you—our supporters—and by the dedication of our staff: Amy Coyne, Tom Durkin, Liz Richards, and Patti DeRochemont; our Board of Directors; our Advisory Council; and our many passionate volunteers. Together, with confidence and conviction, we enter the Foundation's next decade of service—securing the freedom of American captives and safeguarding the courageous storytellers who dare to bring us the truth.

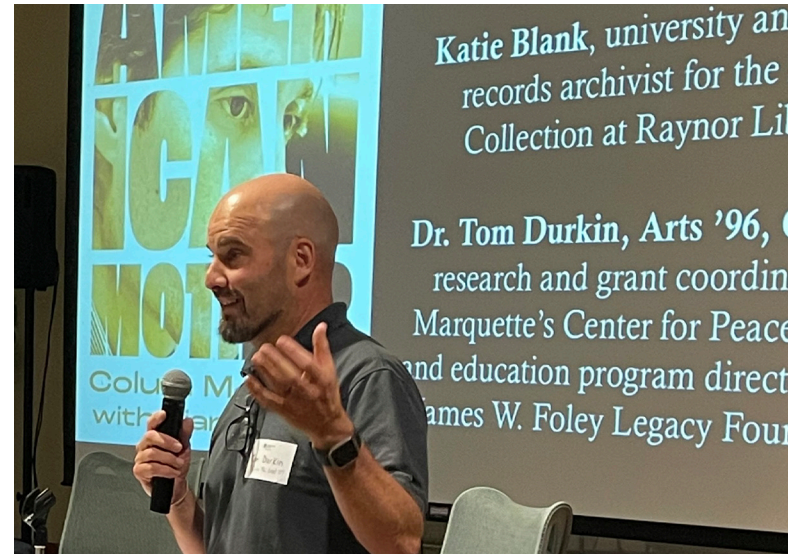

With profound gratitude,
Benjamin Gray

Executive Director

JOURNALIST SAFETY

- With funding from the James P. Ruder Foundation, JWFLF welcomed our fourth Marquette Foley Fellow, Sophia Tiedge, to work with education program director Tom Durkin. This year, Sophia is focused on working with the over 20 colleges and universities that have incorporated elements of the JWFLF Safety Modules into their classrooms while continuing outreach to additional colleges and universities to incorporate safety into their courses. Sophia and Tom are also working with UT-Austin's Professor Kathleen McElroy and graduate student Dustin Hall to conduct an Institutional Review Board-approved survey of journalism students and faculty as well as student newsrooms to better understand what, if any, safety training is being offered to aspiring journalists and what needs exist.
- Using the Foley Foundation's Traveler's Safety Guide as a template, Tom Durkin and board member David Levinson collaborated with Teach for All, a community of changemakers and leaders ensuring children can fulfill their potential, to create a safety guide for their teaching cohorts.
- During 2024, the foundation's partnership with Head Set, an immersive learning system that incorporates VR technology, provided safety training to 30 journalists. Each half-day virtual session, with 10 participating journalists, covered civil unrest and stress management. The Foley Foundation covered the cost for journalists to participate.

- The foundation also participated in several events, including A Culture of Safety Alliance (ACOS) annual safety coordination meeting in NYC, The Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication's annual conference in Philadelphia, and a screening of Jim: The James Foley Story during Marquette University's Mission Week. JWFLF also participated in the Midwest Chapter of the National Academy for Television Arts & Sciences Silver Circle annual awards presentation.

HOSTAGE ADVOCACY

- The Foley Foundation published its 6th annual research report, Bringing Americans Home, on July 24, 2024. This year's report focused on providing updated statistical data regarding hostage-taking and wrongful detention through May 31, 2024. The report was launched at the U.S. Capitol. Report author, Cynthia Loertscher, presented the findings. Following the report overview, Peter Bergen of New America moderated a panel discussion. Panel participants included Loertscher, Pavel Butorin, spouse of Alsu Kurmasheva, who was wrongfully detained in Russia at the time, Jonathan Dekel-Chen, the father of Sagui Dekel-Chen, who was held hostage by Hamas at the time, Dustin Stewart, Deputy Special Presidential Envoy for Hostage Affairs, and Diane Foley, President of the Foley Foundation and mother of conflict journalist James W. Foley.
- On September 18, the Congressional Executive Commission on China held a hearing on Americans being unjustly detained in China. The Foley Foundation submitted written testimony, based on our research, to the commission regarding China's use of wrongful detention. Foley Foundation staff attended the hearing in-person to offer support for the families that testified before the commission. Our research was cited in the commission's letter to the President, urging him to do more to bring Americans wrongfully detained in China home.
- The advocacy team conducted 40 engagements over a six-month period with government officials. This count includes meetings where the foundation team raised both public and private cases with government officials at the National Security Council, Consular Affairs, the Special Presidential Envoy for Hostage Affairs, and Hostage Recovery Fusion Cell. This count also reflects the Congressional outreach the team conducted, visiting members on the Hill.

In 2024, JWFLF provided support for over 37 families directly related to a hostage or detainee held captive abroad.

- In 2024, the foundation supported 37 families, organizing meetings for family members and accompanying them to Congressional offices and to meetings with Executive Branch departments and agencies.

FOLEY FREEDOM FUND

The Foley Foundation was established in 2014 to advocate for American hostages and their families, so that no one would again experience what the Foley family went through. In 2019, we launched the Foley Freedom Fund to be able to support more American hostages and their families, and to ensure that aspiring and freelance journalists have access to preventive safety education. In 2020, we extended our fundraising goal to see our vision realized. Thanks to continued support from our community, we have raised a total of $ $692,835.71 (2019 – 2024)

Our Values:

- Justice: We are committed to resolving the injustice of hostage taking through research and advocacy that shape policies to deter captors and hold them accountable.
- Moral Courage: Inspired by Jim Foley, we seek to encourage and empower all to act with moral conviction - one person at a time for the good of others.
- Compassion: We empathize with and help hostage families confidentially: listening, identifying the resources they need and the obstacles they face, while advocating for their loved ones' swift return.

LEARN MORE ▼ THE FOLEY STORY

To learn more about American conflict journalist James W. Foley, hostage-taking, and the risks freelance journalists take to bring us news, please view the award-winning documentary Jim: The James Foley Story, available on HBO, Netflix, Amazon, and YouTube. Learn about the start of the Foley Foundation by reading American Mother by Colum McCann with Diane Foley.

"For some reason I have physical courage, but, really when I think about it, that's nothing compared to moral courage. I can go and get those shots, but if I don't have the moral courage to challenge authority, to write about things that are going to maybe have reprisals on my career, if I don't have that moral courage, we don't have journalism."
